-commands change the way the curl function interacts with a website

-d manipulates data, has several extensions to get data in a certain format

-f is the failure extension --fail is to fail quietly with no output

-G --get put the post data in the URL and use GET

-i include protocol response headers in your output

-k --insecure allow insecure server connections